

Description

The BOWMAN CONSERVATION AREA was purchased by the town in the late 1960's to protect Sandra Pond then the town's water supply.

The woods of the conservation area are a mixture of hardwoods and red pines planted after the 1953 tornado devastated the area.

Most walkers know of the limited trails displayed on the sign at the entrance to the area, but a much wider range of trails are available, including routes that circle the pond.
